

"Performa's institutional strategic planning work at Holy Family University has improved the emphasis on analysis and conversation with follow-up, linked actions, budget alignment, and assessment measures on campus. We needed a fresh approach to the strategic planning process, one in which every member of the University community had the opportunity for input...and to see just how his or her input was incorporated into the Plan. Performa gave us this approach.."

Challenge >>>

After thirty years as a commuter institution, Holy Family University wished to return to a full residence life program at its Northeast Philadelphia Campus. The institution needed to comprehensively evaluate the feasibility of reinstating a residence life program on campus. Shortly thereafter, the institution was also looking for a new approach to their strategic planning process, one that would emphasize campus-wide involvement and participation.

Solution >>>

Performa was engaged by the University to assess and develop a residence life program that would enhance the Journey of Independence® experience for students. As a result of this work, Holy Family also engaged Performa to facilitate a new institutional strategic planning process. This fresh planning approach, emphasis on analysis and conversation with follow-up and linked actions has been so well received on campus that it has become the model for other projects and activities that demand campus-wide involvement and participation.
